Kelsey Price & Gina Schumacher Lead Non Pro Classic Preliminaries

The first section of the National Reining Breeders Classic Non Pro preliminary round came to a close Tuesday afternoon, and at the end of the day, Kelsey Price and Gina-Maria Schumacher shared the top of the leaderboard with a 220. Price rode Let Err Rip, while Schumacher piloted CS Nifty Sailor.

The first section of the preliminary round kicked off the 2024 NRBC, which expanded to 14 days this year. The event also amended the traditional schedule where the Open and Non Pro Finals were on the final weekend, placing the Non Pro divisions the first week, and the Open the second. That means that after the third section of Non Pro preliminaries on Thursday, the top 30 in the Non Pro Levels 4, 3, 2, and 1 will advance to the clean-slate Finals on Saturday, April 20. Those competitors will be joined by the top 20 in the Prime Time Non Pro and the top 10 in the new Masters Non Pro.

Riders advancing to the Finals will learn their draw position during the Markel Insurance Non Pro Draw Party, slated for Thursday at 6 p.m.

Current leaders through the first section of the Non Pro prelims are:

Level 4 Co- Kelsey Price & Let Err Rip (Magnum Chic Dream x Gunner Be Custom) – 220

Level 4 Co & APHA Non Pro Chrome Cash-Gina-Maria Schumacher & CS Nifty Sailor (Gotta Nifty Gun x La Bigia Sailor) – 220

Owned & Bred by XCS Ranch

Level 3, 2, 1- Miranda Leal & Infernno (Inferno Sixty Six x FS Smart Doc Chic) – 217

Owned & Bred by Gilberto Leal

Non Pro Novice Horse- Emma Vanlandingham & Plus Me Im Shiny (Colonels Shining Gun x Plus One Chex) – 215

Owned by 2Star Investments LLC | Bred by Upstream, Inc.

Masters & Prime Time Non Pro- Lance Griffin & Ticketstothegunshow (Colonels Shining Gun x Yankee Tickets) – 217.5 (with handicap)

Ryder & Sara of Equine Promotion

Everyone who's been to the National Reining Breeders Classic is familiar with Equine Promotion—even if they don't realize it. The Equine Promotion team is responsible for the live and delay feeds as well as arena recordings for riders who want to purchase video of their runs.

Ryder Carmichael has worked for Equine Promotion since 2017. He grew up on a ranch but made the transition to a career in commercial video and audio. When his sister went to work for Jeremy Olsen at Equine Promotion, she recommended Carmichael look into a job there.

"She's like, 'You already come to some of these horse shows, and this is audio and video stuff—that's what you do,'" Carmichael recalled his sister saying to him. "I was like, 'that sounds fun.'"

The rest, as they say, is history. Carmichael's job mainly involves handling and maintaining all the equipment needed to keep a show's video services running smoothly.

"My job revolves a lot more around the technical side of things, like building equipment," he explained. In fact, here at the NRBC, two of the arena feeds are being run off computers he built just last week.

Carmichael also described his position as the 'designated audio guy.'

"Mixers tend to scare a lot of people," he joked. "So I get to handle the audio stuff for a lot of people."

Equine Promotion does the video production for a multitude of different events across the equine performance industry. When the NRBC decided to try a new system of scoring announcements this year, that's similar to what is done in other equine sport associations, where the score is visible only to the audience and not shared by the announcer, Equine Promotion was up to the task.

"It ended up coming down to hardware and a lot of creative backend engineering by Jeremy to put it together," said Carmichael. "It's working great. It looks good."

Sara Tierney is working the Ford Arena Equine Promotion booth with Carmichael here at the NRBC; she was the company's first employee back in 2012.

Tierney says one of the ironic challenges of the video production business is that people mostly only take notice when there's a malfunction.

"It's always when something is going wrong that you hear something," Tierney pointed out, "Or it's all over the internet when things are not working. But I think for the most part, we quietly do our job and we do it really well. And we work really, really well as a team."

She also said that many of her colleagues—herself included—are in the equine video business because they're horse lovers themselves.

"That's my first love really," she said. "The video is why I'm here, right? I mean, I'm doing my job... It's a way to feed the habit. But I'm here because I love the

Treat Yo' Horse at the Cilantro Horse Snack Stop

Your equine athletes work hard! Now thanks to Tinker With Dreams, aka "Cilantro," you can reward your horse with a treat after a big run at the Cilantro Horse Snack Stop outside the Ford Truck Arena. Riders can treat their mounts to a selection of snacks, including apples, carrots, peppermints, and horse cookies, so there's something for even the choosiest of horses.

Cilantro is owned by Diamond Dub Quarter Horses, and was ridden to major victories with Dany Tremblay.

Kalicia Walters of Diamond Dub Quarter Horses said, "We are happy to sponsor the Cilantro Snack Shop because we know, as riders and owners, that we all love spoiling our horses as much as the horses enjoy getting the carrot. It's a win for both the horse and the rider."

Vendor Promo Spotlight

Located in the Ford Truck Barn, Precision Equine Cryotherapy is ready and eager to serve the human and equine athletes of the National Reining Breeders Classic. Cryotherapy can be used for a pre-run energy boost, post-run recovery, injuries, inflammation, and muscle soreness. Precision Equine Cryotherapy is offering several special deals throughout the NRBC.

Those interested in the service can benefit from a free inspection, as well as discounts for the equine athletes topline package and a variety of full body offerings specializing in recovery, energy boost, and detox.

Classic Connection - Amy Cash

Amy Cash first experienced the high that can only come from a clean run in the reining pen eight years ago, and her pursuit of that feeling ever since is what led her to the National Reining Breeders Classic as a first-time competitor.

Growing up in the American Quarter Horse Association as an all-around competitor, Cash felt it was the natural next step to compete for the title of Congress Queen. In 2016, she obtained the title, and as one of her duties, she worked as the scribe for NRHA Judge Bob Kail.

“I think we sat in the chairs for 12 hours one day,” said Cash of her scribing experience. “We just watched run after run, and at the end of the day, I knew this was what I wanted to do.”

When her all-around gelding reached retirement age, Cash took the plunge and purchased not one, but two reining-bred mares.

“It’s been kind of a movement for me,” shared Cash. “I took the next big step and bought a young reiner, and now I’m loving it.”

Although she has progressively become more and more involved in reining, Cash wasn’t sure if she would head to the NRBC. Coming from her home in North Carolina, it’s a little over a 15 hour drive to get here, and despite one of her mares being in Texas with Trent Harvey Performance Horses, she was responsible for hauling the other herself.

“If I’m being honest, I wasn’t going to come to this show,” said Cash. “But everyone at the barn is just all about it, so I had to come try it for myself and just check out why they love it so much.”

The drive may have been long, but for Cash, it was worth it. She hasn’t entered the pen yet on either mare, but has been taking full advantage of the relaxed schedule, variety of locations to ride, and the unique non-riding ways to have fun.

“I know it’s really competitive here, and there’s so many people,” chuckled Cash. “At the same time, it feels really chill, and everyone seems like they’re having fun.”

Classic Connection Krista Marshall

If you see a woman jogging around Expo Square with her brindle boxer, you're looking at North Dakota native and NRHA Non Pro Krista Marshall and her one-year-old pup, Brutus. Marshall trains with Dan Huss in Scottsdale, Arizona, and said she loves being in Huss' barn.

"He's like the professor who you want to learn from..." Marshall explained. "He makes you practice perfect and it gives you a lot of confidence going into the show pen because you're prepared."

For her day job, Marshall is a second-generation truck stop owner. She runs SchatzCrossroads in Minot and described it as a "boutique" truck stop, serving homemade meals to a plethora of regular customers from all walks of life.

Marshall's mount in the Non Pro Classic is six-year-old Sparkin Flinn by In Like Flinn, known around the barn as "Freya," whom she has owned since she was a yearling. Marshall called Freya her "heart horse," commenting, "If she was a person, I'd hang out with her quite often... I feel like we collaborate a lot more than I have with any other horse."

Marshall's other mount here at the NRBC is Flinn And Tonic, called "Rye," another son of In Like Flinn. She said she likes the In Like Flinn pedigree, because "they hold their training and then you ask for more and they give you more."

Still, Marshall confessed she doesn't love Rye quite as much as Freya.

"I wish everybody would have a horse like that..." Marshall said of her mare. "If she can't rein one day, she'll have a place in my backyard at home."

Classic Connecton - Robin Filbry

No one wants to spend time thinking about the worst that can happen, especially when it comes to a beloved equine athlete.

On their way to the National Reining Breeders Classic, Brent Naylor and Robin Filbry narrowly avoided a major accident- but still became stuck in traffic for a staggering ten and half hours.

“We just thanked God we weren’t a little earlier, the accident happened less than a mile ahead of where we were,” expressed Filbry. “After five hours of not moving at all, traffic started to crawl and we passed the accident. It was just burning and there was fire everywhere.”

This delay meant that for Filbry, and the horses, the journey to make it to the National Reining Breeders Classic took more than 24 hours total.

“We’ve always been really adamant about checking the truck and trailer before we get on the road,” said Filbry. “This showed us why it matters to make sure you have your bases covered, because anything can happen.”

While waiting on the interstate, Filbry had plenty of good samaritans offering them assistance and water for their horses, but thanks to their meticulous preparations, they didn’t need the help.

Before departing, Filbry and Naylor’s checklist looks something like this:

- Fill up the trailer water tank
- Give horses forage cube
- Put electrolyte paste in an easily accessible spot
- Make sure the trailer plexi-glass windows are working properly
- Fill a cooler up for the humans
- Verify that emergency medications are packed

Filbry emphasized that what they do isn’t anything special, it’s just the best they can do when the horses they trust to carry them every day, are relying on them instead.

Classic Connections

Boo Ross

For a first-timer, entering the pen at a show like the National Reining Breeders Classic can be intimidating. Lucinda “Boo” Ross, a non pro competitor, came to Tulsa, Ok. for the first time to get her feet wet at a major show, despite her trepidation.

“It’s a huge show,” Ross said, laughing and gesturing at everything going on. “There’s a lot of really good people and riders here, but I’m still excited.”

The NRBC offers a variety of opportunities for a newer rider of any age to explore reining. From green reiner classes to the Yellowstone Paramount Network Rookie Shoutout, there is something at the NRBC for everyone.

“Everyone should absolutely come and show here,” Ross encouraged. “It’s a really great atmosphere, there’s so many ancillary classes, so there’s something for anyone. You’ve got to come here to see it.”

Ross scored an impressive 214.5 in the Non Pro Classic Preliminaries, kicking her first NRBC off with a strong start.

Vendor Promo Spotlight

Dr. Kati Mosteller, owner of B Balanced Chiropractic, is offering a special deal for the equine athletes competing at the National Reining Breeders Classic. Conveniently located in the Ford Barn, B Balanced Chiropractic is excited to serve the competitors of the NRBC. Deals offered throughout the duration of the show are as follows:

Trainers receive 20% off the treatment of their personal horse.

“Family Deal”- 3 or more horses from a single owner/barn receive $25 off treatment each horse.
