Novice Horse Non Pro Levels 2 & 3 Champion

Jesse Asmussen & TR Fire On Ice

Jesse Asmussen is depositing double into his wallet after securing the Novice Horse Non Pro Level 2 & Novice Horse Non Pro Level 3 win. Scoring a 74, Asmussen and TR Fire On Ice are bringing home $620 from the Level 3 win and $595 from the Level 2 win.

TR Fire On Ice is owned by Asmussen and bred by Tamarack Ranch. By SG Frozen Enterprise and out of Spooks N Sparks, the five-year-old mare has now added over a thousand dollars to her lifetime earnings of $23,234.

“We bought her as a three-year-old from Tamarack Ranch. She’s a really sweet, quiet mare. She’s kind of like a family pet.” Asmussen said.

Considering Asmussen didn’t enter Tulsa city limits until late last night, the spontaneity of entering the novice classes made the win even more special. “We didn’t get here until late last night. I rode her last night and this morning, and she walked in there, and she was very, very focused the whole time... It was very simple for a ride, it was easy to sit there.”

Asmussen thanks his friends, Kole and Kelsey Price, family, children, and most specifically, wife, Rebecca Asmussen, for the support. “She (Rebecca) was the one that’s been down here all week and got the horse ready. And when she missed the finals, she said, why don’t you show her in the Novice? And I said, “Sure.”

In the form of two class wins, saying “sure” most certainly paid off.

Classic Connection

Wolfgang Hammer

Hailing from Niederösterreich, Austria, Wolfgang Hammer is an NRBC competitor charting new territory in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Having traveled over 5,000 miles to be here, this is Hammer's first NRBC experience. "This is my first time (at the NRBC). It's really amazing. The fairground is big, the organization is very good, the people are friendly, the grounds are perfect for the horses – it's a great location," Hammer said.

While Hammer has been involved in the reining industry since 2005, he considers himself a rookie competing on U.S. dirt. "Last year, I decided I wanted to show here in the United States. Last year was also when I met Martin (Muehlstaetter). The reining industry is not so big in Austria, but it's an important country in Europe and has the Austrian Reining Association. We have a lot of good riders there."

Tied for fourth in the Level 2 Limited Non Pro Classic, Hammer is making it back to Saturday's Finals as a first timer at the NRBC. He and his horse, Annies Voodoo Dr, a 5-year-old gelding bred by Frederick Christen, spun their way to a 215.5 score. "I want to say thank you to my horse. We found him last year in October, and he's really talented. And it was luck to find him. He was the last horse I tried," Hammer said.

Since Austria is Hammer's primary zip code, Annies Voodoo Dr is left in the hands of Martin. Living in one country and keeping his horse in another isn't the easiest, but having a trainer he trusts makes it possible. "It's not easy. Normally I have my horses home, and I ride my horses at home by myself, every day. So it's really different. It's important that you have a good team, a good trainer, that takes care of your horses and knows how you ride it."

While Hammer is heading back to Austria come Sunday and Annies Voodoo Dr is not, the mark the team has left at their first NRBC is permanent.

Classic Connection

Rylee & Dawn Butler

While many families attend reining shows together, not many compete head to head. Rylee and Dawn Butler are a mother and daughter duo who do commonly share the saddle.

Although Dawn handed the reins over to Rylee at this year's NRBC, often-times, the two are both in the arena – and on the same horses. “It’s fun because we get to share the same experiences and are able to talk about it. It’s one thing to explain it, it’s another thing to be able to feel it. Getting to share back and forth can be challenging for sure, but it’s fun to have that connection,” Rylee said.

The NRBC is an event Rylee and Dawn have been a part of for upwards of five years now, and it's a show they view as a must-attend event in their household. “At these NRBC shows, you kind of get in a rhythm, and it's really fun because you have specific memories at specific shows. The NRBC for us has always been a really good show, and it's always been run extremely well. This is one that we always really look forward to every year – getting to come show in this big, beautiful facility,” Rylee said. Rylee finished sixth in the Level 2 Limited Non Pro Classic and will be advancing to the finals on Saturday aboard personally owned mount, SS Rock My World. The 5 year-old-mare is by Ruf Lil Magnum and out of Xtra Ruby Step and bred by Silver Spurs Equine.

Despite Dawn being off the entry list at 2025's NRBC, she competed last year and made the Level 3 Intermediate Non Pro Classic Finals. This year, she's focusing on the success of her daughter, the very thing that got her into the industry of reining. “Rylee started in youth classes, and it was just more fun to show together than only be a show mom. So I decided that I would show along with her and that we'd get to do this together, to experience it together,” Dawn said.

Rylee is grateful for her mom's experience in the reining arena and the ability to share it – and even if Dawn herself isn't competing at this one, that connection is a constant. “I always joke that you feel in a year what you feel in the span of a horseshow. Not only is my mom able to cheer me on from the fence, but she's also been through it, and I'm able to share that back with her. Understanding what each other is going through allows for those moments in the tack room where you can really lift each other up and help be your best self in the show pen.”

Classic Connection

Marcus Miller

Very seldom do trainers show at the NRBC without the help of assistant trainers. Marcus Miller is one of these reliable forces you see rushing between barn aisles and warm up pens.

Miller started working in the training industry at 15 in his home state of Ohio. At first, he was just breaking colts for a trainer, but a client's words of encouragement persuaded him to dip into the reining side of things. After getting experience under his belt from several different trainers and then moving to Oklahoma, Miller crossed paths with Austin Roush, who had also recently moved to Oklahoma from Ohio.

"I saw that he moved, and I was like, 'He might be looking for somebody.' I've always seen that his assistant had good horses to show... So I went for one day and just rode with him."

Miller has been working for Roush for the last three years and consistently hauls with him to shows. "He's given me a lot of good opportunities to show. When I first started working for him, showing was kind of what I lacked and didn't do a lot of. He got me in the show pen and on good horses. He works hard at trying to set me up with horses to show, while he could just be focusing on himself." Miller said.

"I like coming and bringing the three-year-olds to kind of get them used to all the traffic and getting them used to the show situation. The atmosphere is good – you have a lot of good trainers here, and you can learn stuff just by watching." Miller will be competing in the Novice classes aboard two of Roush's client horses – an opportunity Miller is grateful for.
